Overview of Cambridge Global Perspectives (Grades 5–8)

Dear Parents,

This is an overview of the importance of Cambridge Global Perspectives, a subject designed to equip students with vital research, analytical, and communication skills. At Rosary School Marj El Hamam, the program is offered from Grades 5 to 8. In today's digital world, where information is plentiful but not always reliable, the ability to identify credible sources, evaluate them critically, and use information ethically has become an essential life skill.

What students learn and why it matters:

Cambridge Global Perspectives focuses on developing essential research skills, teaching students how to gather, evaluate, and use information from trustworthy websites and publications. By guiding students to recognize reliable sources and cite them appropriately, we empower them to navigate information critically and ethically.

Writing research papers not only deepens their understanding of various topics but also sharpens analytical and organizational skills. This process equips learners to present well-informed arguments and prepares them for future academic and professional challenges.

Students' Reflection

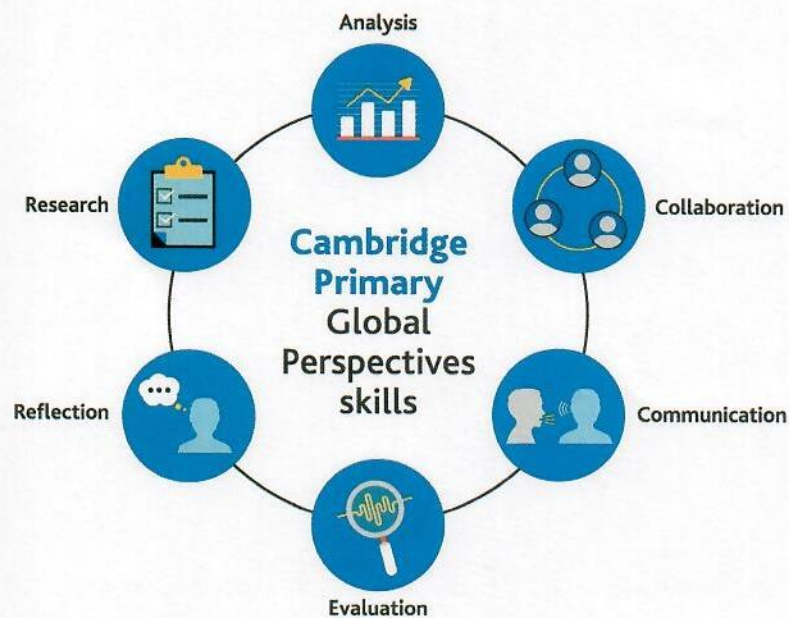

“By studying Cambridge Global Perspectives, we feel that we are giving ourselves an excellent opportunity to succeed in our other school subjects, as well as in university and our future careers”.

This subject has been a strong starting point for further studies within the IG curriculum, especially for research-focused subjects such as the Extended Project Qualification (EPQ), which students take during A Level studies.”

What learners experience in Global Perspectives:

- The chance to explore global issues that matter most to them.
- Universities highly regard the opportunity to acquire presentation, collaboration, and research skills.
- The freedom to question, think independently, and reflect.
- The chance to express themselves through team projects, independent research, and oral presentations.
- The opportunity to consider multiple viewpoints on a global topic and to reflect on their own perspectives.

The diagram below illustrates the key skills developed in Global Perspectives:

With respect and appreciation,
